JLL and LabCorp team up to enable safer, healthier workplaces

LabCorp's Employer Services wellness screenings support effective workplace re-entry and management

CHICAGO, July 22, 2020 – Health, safety and wellness are top of mind for employers as they bring workers back to the office while navigating dynamic local conditions. While always a priority, the COVID-19 pandemic has made these principles critical to opening and maintaining offices thoughtfully and effectively, giving employees the peace of mind they need in the workplace. That is why JLL is pleased to announce it is collaborating with LabCorp \(NYSE: LH\), a global life science company and a leading provider of healthcare diagnostics.

“More than ever, employees and companies are focused on health and safety in the work environment,” said Cynthia Kantor, JLL Chief Product Officer. “While we at JLL have always valued these principles and supported clients and occupiers in creating healthy experiences, we want our clients to have access to the best tools and services to make the working world comfortable and resilient in this ‘next normal.’ We’re proud to utilize LabCorp Employer Services to help occupiers in the U.S. re-open their spaces, enhance the confidence of their employees, and foster an enduring culture of health and well-being.”

Through JLL’s collaboration with LabCorp, clients in the U.S. can access a comprehensive suite of employee wellness services and a vast network of professionals who have deep expertise in delivering these important wellness services. LabCorp Employer Services can offer access to all services, including:

- Temperature and Symptom Screening
- PCR Testing (symptomatic for virus)
- Serology Testing (antibody)
- Flu vaccinations
- Biometric screenings

“Getting people back to work safely and effectively requires a comprehensive suite of health and testing services that are customized to fit the specific needs of each company,” said Brian Caveney, Chief Medical Officer and President of LabCorp Diagnostics. “We look forward to working with JLL, a leading professional services firm that specializes in real estate and investment management, and helping their clients develop and execute their workplace re-entry strategies.”

The LabCorp collaboration continues JLL’s effort to promote health, resiliency and safety as an integral part of re-entry and the ongoing operations of workplaces. JLL recently announced a collaboration with SGS, the world’s leading inspection, verification, testing and certification company, to help building owners and occupiers confirm their spaces are cleaned appropriately and safe.
